Landi Osuna Ericsson is a direct, physically strong, and attack-minded player who brings both pace and power to the final third. Standing at approximately 188 cm, he combines his size and strength with mobility and an instinctive sense for goal contributions. Currently representing Vänersborgs FK, he has established himself as a decisive player in the attacking phase and a constant threat to opposing defences.

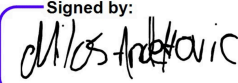

Offensively, Osuna Ericsson thrives in a 4-3-3 system where he can operate as a striker, left winger, or right winger. He is highly effective when playing with his back to goal, using his physicality to hold off defenders and link up in combination play. Equally, his acceleration and timing of runs in behind make him dangerous in transitional moments and when exploiting defensive lines.

He is confident in one-on-one situations, able to eliminate defenders with direct play and decisiveness. His attacking instinct allows him to create and finish chances, showing a natural ability to both score and provide assists.

From a tactical standpoint, his versatility across the front line and his balance between physical presence and pace make him a valuable fit for dynamic attacking systems. He offers a blend of target-man qualities and modern wide forward attributes, allowing flexibility depending on team setup and opposition.

A key area for development is his aerial ability. Improving his heading technique and presence in aerial duels will add another dimension to his attacking profile, particularly in box situations and set pieces.

Off the pitch, Osuna Ericsson demonstrates a professional attitude and strong work ethic. His mindset, focus, and commitment to improvement indicate that he is fully dedicated to his football development. Finding the right environment to challenge and refine his skills will be crucial for his next step.
