Report by: Scoutbridge

Adam Johansson is a hardworking right back known for his pace, consistency, and strong mentality. A former IF Elfsborg player, he is now an important part of Bergdalens IK, where he continues to develop into a modern full-back. Johansson displays leadership qualities, maturity, and a relentless work rate that makes him a reliable performer throughout the full 90 minutes.

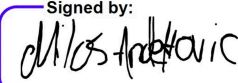

With the ball, Johansson contributes effectively in the attacking phase. He times his forward runs with precision, providing width and depth on the right side. His speed allows him to exploit spaces behind the opposition, and he suits a counter-attacking style where he can progress quickly from a low block into offensive transitions. Despite his defensive role, Johansson is frequently involved in the final third, having scored 4 goals this season from the right-back position – underlining his attacking threat and end product.

Defensively, he is strong in one-on-one situations, showing good timing and composure when engaging opponents. His recovery pace and positioning make him dependable both in open play and defensive transitions.

Tactically, Johansson fits well in a 3-5-2 formation as a right-sided wingback, where his athleticism and timing of forward runs are fully utilized. He also adapts well to a 4-4-2 system, offering overlapping support and contributing to a direct, counter-attacking style.

A key area for development is his crossing – both in terms of quality and frequency – to increase his attacking impact from wide positions. With improvement in delivery and offensive consistency, he can elevate his contribution further.

Given his physical qualities, tactical discipline, leadership profile, and proven attacking output, Johansson is projected to be ready for Ettan Fotboll (Sweden, third tier) in 2026. With continued refinement in his final-third execution, he has the potential to climb higher in the Swedish football pyramid.
